Job description

We're in search of a proficient ASIC Engineer to join our team. The ideal candidate will be responsible for designing and validating digital systems and sub-systems within a collaborative team, working alongside digital architects, back-end engineers, and FPGA experts.

Responsibilities:

Develop and maintain digital designs for ASIC implementation.

Formulate test plans, collaborating with stakeholders for alignment.

Verify digital aspects of the ASIC from block level to top level.

Develop and maintain test scripts for automated verification processes.

Execute verification across process corners and with post-layout designs.

Support mixed-signal verification engineers in their tasks.

Enhance existing designs as needed.

Report progress and issues to the team lead/project leader and customer.

Conduct FPGA prototyping as necessary.

Assist in silicon validation activities.

Requirements:

Possess a University Degree (Master or Bachelor) in Electrical Engineering.

Accumulate a minimum of five years of experience in digital design and verification.

Exhibit fluency in verbal and written English.

Experience in the Medical Devices field.

Demonstrate a solid grasp of digital ASIC design flows.

Proficient in VHDL/Verilog/SystemVerilog/UVM and adept in Cadence tools.

What we offer:

Join our dynamic team of talented people and discover a world full of growth and opportunity. Here's what we offer:

Rapid growth through a personalized career path and salary evaluation. 70% of our senior leaders started in entry-level roles.
